

Does the Depth / phaC-Cluster Pattern Hold Beyond Vibrio?

Each point is one genome; color = its phaC cluster (own palette per genus — colors are not comparable across columns)

Genera chosen for having both a wide depth range and a manageable number of distinct phaC clusters, like Vibrio. If clusters cluster tightly by depth band within a column (as in the standalone Vibrio figure), that genus shows the same depth-structuring pattern.